*Eastwood nurtures positive development in people's lives

"The man who is wise, therefore, will see his life as more like a reservoir than a canal. The canal simultaneously pours out what it receives; the reservoir retains the water till it is filled, then discharges the overflow without loss to itself ... Today there are many in the Church who act like canals, the reservoirs are far too rare ... You too must learn to await this fullness before pouring out your gifts, do not try to be more generous than God." — Bernard of Clairvaux, On the Song of Songs

I came across this quote recently while preparing to a meditation on prayer and it got me thinking about the importance of renewal and rest. I often rest because I'm wind-ed, or physically worn out, but frankly I probably don't rest enough when I'm emotion-ally, socially, spiritually, creatively, or mentally tired. In my genuine desire to serve God, occasionally I minister to the point of feeling completely drained emotionally and spiritually.

I imagine this happens to you too. I think most of us wear out and feel drained, simply because most of us live like canals, and not reservoirs. We run and work and worry until our bodies make us take a break through illness or breakdown. We operate with the hope that if we can just make it to the next vacation, we'll take a rest and be recharged for the next year!

The problem is that one or two weeks are not enough time to fill a reservoir. That two week vacation is like a big rain storm that comes and dumps a couple inches of wa-ter. Oh, sure, the water level rises, but as we all know, flood stage doesn't last all that long. All too soon, our emotional, spiritual and physical energy is back to a level where we question if we can make it to the next holiday.

In the creation account in Genesis 1, God worked for six days and then took a Sab-bath (for you academics this is the root of your Sabbatical). Later in Exodus 20:8, God tells the Hebrews to honor the Sabbath and keep it holy. If God felt the need for a rest, and communicated to us the need to rest, perhaps we ought to reconsider re-serving a day each week for renewal, allowing us to refill on a more regular basis?

Resting/refilling is one part of transforming from a canal to a reservoir, but it isn't the only thing that we need to do. Reservoirs are deep; without that depth, they don't have the capacity to release a flow of water during periods of drought. To make a canal into a reservoir, we need to dredge and dig out some depth. This is work that happens below the surface. In our physical, spiritual and emotional lives, this means doing the hard work of self-discipline and self-examination. You may find that you need outside help in the form of coaches, counselors or spiritual directors in order to develop the depth of strength, character and spirit required to be a reservoir. Their suggestions may lead to physical exercise, fasting, meditation or regular prayer. You may even find that you need to clean up the emotional trauma from childhood events.

The last thing that a reservoir needs is systems in place to ensure that they don't drain too quickly. All reservoirs have boundaries with controls to regulate the flow or resources out of them. Do you have adequate boundaries? Many of us struggle later in life with one of the first words we ever learn.

"No."

Matthew 5:37 and James 5:12 both encourage us to let our 'yes be yes, and our no be no'. Now I know that this is referring to the practice of swearing and oaths, but consider the underlying assumption. We are expected to say 'no' and 'yes'. If you don't relearn to say 'no' you won't have the reserves for those times you need and really want or need to say 'YES!'

I hope you'll consider joining me and many others in some self-renovation projects. Let's work on transforming the canals of our lives into deep, cool, refreshing reservoirs that have the capacity to minister out of abundance!

Generosity Is . . . Giving Ourselves to God

The Generosity Project is a collaborative effort between ABCUSA, regions, and local congregations. The Generosity Project aims to help pastors re-frame the conversation around stewardship and generosity in their congregations.

Parker Palmer wrote, "...the most important sentence I've ever written is that one word, "Enough." Said on the right occasion, that word can safeguard one's soul, and saying it comes more easily with age. These days I say "enough" without hesitation to anything that's not life-giving for me and for the people and world I care about—whether it's frenzy and overwork, a personal prejudice, an unhealthy relationship, a societal cruelty or injustice...I no longer ask, "What do I want to let go of, and what do I want to hang on to?" Instead I ask, "What do I want to let go of, and what do I want to give myself to?"

As fall descends, we enter the season of letting go. I appreciate Parker Palmer's wise words about knowing when to say "enough." In a world full of the temptation for more—more stuff, more work, more busy-ness—"enough" is a sacred word. But this boundary claiming isn't just about paring back. It is about gaining the wisdom to know what to invest ourselves in with our time, talent, treasure, and temperament. I believe generosity asks us, "what do you want to give yourself to"? Our commitments, our actions, our words, and even our budgets become the answer as we live it out.

And this question isn't just for the individual, but for the church, for my congregation and yours. What do we want to give ourselves to? What does God want us to give ourselves to? Well, that's an even better question. We cling to our traditions and the things we have always done, we spend endless hours in committees and talking our way around, but what does God want us to give ourselves to now? Chances are, in our ever-changing world, it doesn't look like what God was asking of us 50 years ago. I think we would do well to spend time with this question, in prayer and in communal discernment. Listen for God's voice leading us—and then, may God help us find the courage to go where God sends us.

Rev. Stacy Emerson is the senior pastor of the First Baptist Church in West Hartford, CT and the Stewardship Consultant for ABCUSA. She is also the Coordinator for The Generosity Project which is about helping congregations deepen their understanding of stewardship as a call to generosity as disciples of Jesus; re-framing the stewardship conversation; and cultivating generosity in pastors, lay people, and congregations.

WORLD MISSION OFFERING

WHY GIVE TO THE WMO?

Answers to your most frequently asked questions about the World Mission Offering.

How are my gifts for the WMO used?

WMO gifts, like all gifts to the IM General Fund, are used 84% for mission program (global servant, partner and other ministry support), 10% for administrative support and 6% for development costs.

What about my gifts to Global Servants?

All global servant personalized support is targeted for global servants. Each year, IM global servants seek to raise approximately $10.7 million of the $13.8 million needed for their ministry programs.

What else do my WMO gifts do?

Whenever personalized funding falls short, the WMO gifts fill the gap so that global servants can stay in the field; continue in ministry; receive income and benefits; and cover ministry expenses such as education, visas and passports. WMO gifts also fill the gaps in funding for other IM expenses so that IM can continue to support global servants with services such as training, networking, promotion and pastoral care; address crises whenever they arise; and so much more.

What is Ministry Support and Education?

This refers to the cost of providing financial accountability and maintaining up-to-date and transparent communications. It includes expenses associated with IM's website, training conferences, donor support, brochures, the Guide to Global Servants, WMO materials, emails, management of ministry project funds, and more.

What is Administrative Support?

This is the part of IM's budget that keeps all operations running, by providing staff to serve global servants, IRS compliance measures, and offices for the home staff.
